ABOUT WAR TAXES

With everybody now doing something to "help win the war," by paying war taxes on every form of amusement and pleasure, many kinds of practices on the part of those catering to the public are in evidence.

As a specific instance some of the movie houses formerly charging 10c admission raised the price to 15c to include the war tax; some charging 15c raised to 20c, thereby making 3c for themselves and 2c for Uncle Sam.

In contrast to this, our own Cosmopolitan, although it makes more work in checking up, etc., maintain their old prices, simply adding the war tax, thereby continuing their well established policy of the biggest show for the money.

Eva Tanguay in "The Wild Girl" at the Cosmopolitan

Eva Tanguay is known in almost every town, and yet outside of the large cities a great majority of people have never had an opportunity to see this eccentric vaudeville star on the speaking stage. It is interesting to watch her work, and many of her eccentricities, reproduced on the screen, make her refreshing and different from most screen stars. Then the story of this production is somewhat out of the beaten track and has been well handled. Tom Moore is the hero, and Stuart Holmes, as the villain par excellence, adds one more laurel to his ability as the bad man. The direction is by Howard Estabrook.

The story: Leander Martin dies, leaving his daughter in the care of kind gypsies. She is known as the Firefly, and when she becomes a young lady is married to Andrio, the bad man of the gypsy tribe. Firefly makes her escape and falls into the hands of Donald McDonald, a young newspaper editor. She has a letter which proves her to be the lost niece of the wealthy Mr Martin of Meadville. Her identification established, Firefly becomes an inmate of the Martin home, displacing Martin's sister and crooked son. Firefly loves Donald, but when she believes him married she returns to the gypsy tribe. Donald, hearing of her disappearance, notifies the sheriff. They attack the gypsy encampment, and Firefly—well, remember, she's a wild girl.

Wednesday, Nov. 7, first and only time in this vicinity, right through supper hour, commencing 15 minutes earlier, 1.45 to 6.45—6:45 to 11.30, no increase in prices; same as preceding day. Excellent supporting cast, including Wallace Reid and Hobart Bosworth.

State Meeting of Illinois Federation of Woman's Clubs

To Be Held in Chicago, in Sinai Temple, 46th St. and Grand Blvd., November 12th to 15th

On account of the times and the varied work undertaken by the women's clubs in the state, this promises to be the most interesting meeting for many years. Reports of work of the clubs will be given; one interesting item will be the work done in carrying out the plans of the Council of National Defense. Our state president, Miss Jessie I. Spofford, being chairman of the committee of coordination in the woman's committee of the Council of National Defense.

There will be entertainment for our guests, as well as opportunity to attend grand opera, for which special rates have been secured.

The club women in Chicago are urged to remember how royally the out-of-town clubs have entertained them for many years, and that now they have an opportunity to return this hospitality. Let each club member entertain as many guests as possible, just giving a room and breakfast does not work a hardship for anyone.

The A. P. M. E. Church held a very successful bazaar last week.

Miss Josephine and Marie Kelly, 7830 May St., gave a successful card party on Saturday, Oct. 27, for the benefit of the Dominican Sisters.

We are glad to hear that Mrs. O'Connor, 7816 Aberdeen St., is feeling better.

Sugar in Auburn Park seems as precious as diamonds. Well, we are glad flour is making its arrival, however. I guess it's not coming on an express train.

Mrs. Krauss, 7750 Sangamon St., is home from the hospital, where she has undergone a successful operation.

Opera in English at the Strand Theater costs only 50c—25c on Wednesday and Saturday matinees. What entertainment could be better or cheaper?

A thrilling fight under water is vividly shown in the forthcoming Metro special production de luxe, "A Sleeping Memory," starring Emily Stevens, which will be shown at the Cosmopolitan Theater on Tuesday.

"Jack and the Beanstalk"

Directed by C. M. and S. A. Franklin; produced by Fox; presented at the Cosmopolitan Friday and Saturday.

The Princess .. .. Virginia Corbin
Prince Rudolpho. .. Violet Radcliffe
The King ..... Carmen Fay De Rue

The Giantess ..... Vera Lewis
Jack's Mother . Eleanor Washington

Here's the cinema come to childhood with a vitalized fairy tale such as the fairvest dreams of we grownups never conceived.

"Jack and the Beanstalk" a la Mr Fox is a dream of fun him for little folks, and for grownups, too, who have the backward turning feelings It keeps the child spirit of the players in a measure greater than it is preserved in the later film, "Aladdin, or the Wonderful Lamp," and the picture is by so much better. Besides, this is a more dearly loved tale and the film magic has reproduced wonderfully all its salient features

The marvel of the growing beanstalk, the great giant, his giant house and belongings, the little people and their tiny homes, the hen that lays the golden eggs -there is a wealth of realization of our favorite imaginings.

The Franklins invented a vast deal of warfare which involved the little people and the small kingdom, and introduced a fine young villain in the person of Violet Radcliffe.

There was reason for it, of course; the greatest reason in the world — feminine interest. All this accounted for and supported the princess person who, in the charming package, Virginia Lee Corbin, furnished forth the romance, overlooked by the ancient chronicler of the tale, who had he been a modern would most probably have rectified that omission himself.

Anyhow, the princess, as is the way of women, somewhat alters the historic procedure, introducing a stretch of pygmy warfare, the best part of which being where the giant devastates the tiny homes, and eliminating the bag of treasure stolen by the redoubtable Jack.

Jack himself, the sunny-haired little Francis Carpenter, stands out as a wonder child--a beautiful, plucky, honest little boy hero, to see whom is to love. He is a real player, and the Franklins have set forth his talents richly.

Vera Lewis, who does the Mrs. Giant, is like an illustration come to life straight from the fairy book, so picturesque and characterful is she as mistress of the mansion. The giant himself, a towering cowboy from the western plains,
